Introduction

Description White Monkey Tea Extract is derived from the tender young leaves and buds of the Camellia sinensis plant, cultivated primarily in the mountainous regions of China. Known for its delicate, slightly floral taste with sweet undertones, White Monkey Tea (also called Bai Mao Hou) is a white tea that undergoes minimal processing to preserve its natural polyphenols and antioxidants, such as catechins. This extract captures the tea's subtle flavor and beneficial compounds, making it a premium ingredient for health products, skincare, and gourmet applications.

Applications Health Supplements: White Monkey Tea Extract is valued for its high antioxidant content, notably catechins and EGCG, which support immune health, cellular protection, and overall well-being. It is commonly used in capsules, powders, and liquid supplements designed for health-conscious consumers. Food and Beverages: The mild, slightly floral taste of White Monkey Tea Extract lends itself well to premium beverages, such as iced teas, tea blends, and functional beverages. It's also popular in gourmet applications like confectionery, where it imparts a subtle tea flavor to chocolates, pastries, and desserts. Weight Management and Detox Formulations: With its metabolism-supporting catechins and caffeine content, White Monkey Tea Extract is used in weight management products, detox teas, and formulations aimed at enhancing fat oxidation and supporting energy levels in a natural, gentle way.
